

E-Learning Computer Based Training:

Essentials of Health & Safety Law for Directors and Senior Managers – What you need to know to protect your organisation and keep you out of jail

Regulatory compliance in health & safety is an area of increasing concern for all organisations and their leadership teams. This computer based training explains why directors and senior managers need to be wary of personal criminal prosecution arising from health & safety risks associated with their work. It gives practical tips to reduce the likelihood of criminal prosecution for directors, senior managers and their organisations.

In recent years, the risk of criminal prosecution has grown and the penalties have now become much greater, with a lower threshold for imprisonment. But it is not all doom and gloom. Opportunity stems from greater clarity on what you have to do to comply with the law. Guidance has been produced, setting out how you are expected to act in order to reduce the risk of accidents happening 'on your watch' and thereby reduce your vulnerability to prosecution.

Contents:

- Essentials of health & safety law
- Areas of particular concern for directors and senior managers (as well as trustees and governors)
- Practical tips to protect your organisation and keep you out of jail
- The training is interspersed with self-test questions to keep you on track and ends with a test

Practicalities:

The training is usually completed within 50 minutes at your desk and at a time that suits you. As a useful demonstration of compliance with the law, your organisation can access a dashboard to monitor who has taken the training and passed the test.

Tailored to your needs:

The training has been written by Dr Simon Joyston-Bechal, solicitor and director at Turnstone Law, which is a boutique law firm specialising in health & safety criminal defence. Simon has acted for many companies and directors facing criminal prosecution for health & safety incidents. He has developed legal tools to reduce exposure to prosecution and this computer based training is a condensed version of the highly regarded face-to-face training that he has provided to directors across the UK.
