

WEST WIND PASS - JULY 2019

After a rainy week, our hiking day started with a cloudless sky and 5 eager hikers ready to hit the trail.

The trail had lots of traffic but was in good condition even though trail markings were lacking. It was a relatively short 2.5 km to the pass with 400 meters of elevation gain.

We had a leisurely lunch where we could enjoy the views into Wind Valley

To get a better view of Spray Lake Reservoir, we did a bit of extra climbing and exploring in the area.

All in all, it was a great day with a great group of people that will produce lasting memories of our beautiful Rocky Mountains.
