Bengal Cat, Male, 1 1/2 years old

Owners: P.J. Heyliger and Stanley Lode

Where and Why:

They bought Chui Paka from a cattery in Santa Fe, NM. They needed another kitty because we had to have our beloved Sharach put down because of cancer. That was an absolute heart breaker for them. After a few months, they decided that they just needed another cat and started looking on the internet. Since they have a house in Santa Fe, they decided that would be a good place to look, after checking out the cattery on the internet. P.J. and Stan were catless from January to November. Then little, one pound, Chui Paka came into their lives. He was so sweet and such a lap cat ... Bengals are not lap cats ... so that didn't last very long.

They searched for names, picked out several, then out of the blue, they found out that Paka meant cat in Swahili, so then Chui means leopard, and since he is a leopard cat, that became his name. The breed is a mix of an Asian Leopard and a domestic cat.

Chui Paka is a very special cat, he has two hearts on each side (rosettes they are called), he is extremely smart, he does know several words like "no," "down," "food," and a few others, but that does not mean he is going to mind ... only if or when his mood suits him. He loves to have a person hold and brush him so he can scratch his chin, he wants to do it himself. He loves emery boards, so it is impossible to file fingernails with him around unless he has his own board. He likes to play with springs, but mostly likes homemade toys, such as cut-up toilet rolls, he wants to put them in hard to retrieve places so he can have a challenge to get them back out in the open space. He retrieves much like a dog and runs around with something in his mouth taking it from place to place. He also likes to play hide and see but his tail usually gives him away. Another trick is arching his back and fuzzing out his tail acting like a Halloween cat. He gives P.J. and Stan a lot of laughs when they are having their tea after breakfast, great for entertainment. They just can't imagine their lives without Chui Paka.
