42. Further Description of Important Features (Continue on reverse if necessary) This vernacular, cross-gabled house has two brick chimneys: one in center of gable ridge, and one in the rear gable end. Entrance in the front gable has been covered by an enclosed porch addition (featuring gable roof, casement windows, and fieldstone foundations). The house detailing is limited to wide frieze boards, end and water table boards. Windows are a mix of 1/1, 2/2,		26. Local Contact Person or Organization Kevin Pape: KI Hist Survey
43. History and Significance Maps suggest that this was the J. Moos, and later Frederick Meyers house: * The 1874 Atlas shows a structure corresponding to this site on 5 acres of land, and the 1896 Atlas shows the same lot now owned by Frederick Meyers. Information by the Hamilton Collection indicates that the Moos house was occupied by Meyers, and later by "Orlo" Beatty. However, other information		27. Other Surveys in Which Included N/A from the same collection indicates that the house was built by George Gerlach in 1903. Court records cite J. Moos as purchasing this 5 acre lot from George Kelley in 1860, and the 1870 census shows him living in this vicinity and working as a quarry laborer. Another entry of 1884 indicates Frederick Meyers now the owner, and an addition made to the house. The architecture reflects at least a later rebuilding and substantiates the 1903 date. However, there are also elements of the architecture that may be vestiges of the c1860's Moos house later remodeled by Gerlach in 1903. George Gerlach, the builder (or rebuilder) was a well known island carpenter who did a great deal of construction and remodeling in the period between 1900 and 1930 including his own house on Division St. (ERI-1605). Frederick "Stinky" Meyers was a German farmer and grapegrower who emigrated from Hanover in 1866 coming to the island sometime between 1870 and 1880. He lived in this house through 1910. The next known owner was Orville Beatty and his wife, Neva Dwelle Beatty who purchased the home c.1965. Both were members of old island families. Orville was a fisherman who worked with his brother, Henry, from the Island's north side, and using the old Smith Saloon as his twine shanty. *John Moos house built 1862 on Lot
