

The Archery Club Gossip

Sarah, who was the local archery club gossip and self-appointed supervisor of the club's morals, kept sticking her nose into other people's business. Several members were unappreciative of her activities, but feared her tongue enough to maintain their silence.

She made a mistake, however, when she accused George, a new member, of being a drunk after she saw his pickup truck frequently parked in front of the town's only bar during the week.

She commented to George and others that everyone seeing it there would know that he was just a big drunk. George, a man of few words, stared at her for a moment and just walked away. He said nothing.

So every night for the next week, George quietly parked his pickup in front of Sarah's house..... AND left it there all night.