

As a nation, we've long promised ourselves an honest conversation about race.

A new weekly public radio show and podcast, is that conversation – with a difference:

it's not about answers; it's about questions.

Now, when, as Nobel laureate William Faulkner wrote, "The past is not dead and gone; it is not even past" . . . "JANUS ADAMS" is a show about race – every race – and courage.

- ★ What is this thing called race?
- ★ Why does it so define and dominate us – whether we are aware of it or not?
- ★ What does race add to our understanding of the world and what does it take away?
- ★ Can we please talk about something else?

Yes. JANUS ADAMS talks about what really matters in all our lives: our journeys to 'History, Heritage, Hope, and Home.'TM

Dr. Janus Adams – Emmy Award-winning journalist, former NPR National Arts Correspondent and commentator, bestselling author and historian – is host.

Matthew Mixon – Emmy Award-winning producer; former Director of Programming, Sales, and Affiliate Relations for Post-Newsweek, Clear Channel, and CBS – is co-producer.

In interviews and audio journeys across deep demographic minefields, JANUS ADAMS brings listeners the voices of public figures we want to know better and everyday people from whom we hear too little. JANUS ADAMS mines for the new ideas, varied perspectives – sometimes difficult and disturbing; always thoughtful and reasoned -- we simply need to hear.

Engage the past, enrich the present as JANUS ADAMS takes us on a journey from history to healing . . . and beyond.

FYI:

Available to public radio stations nationwide:
October 1, 2016

Produced at:
WJFF-FM

Distributed by: PRX
(Public Radio Exchange)

Podcasts available to global audiences via:
SoundCloud

Frequency:
weekly, Saturdays

Promos, rundowns
available: Thursdays

Avg. Length: 59:00

JOIN THE CONVERSATION:

To subscribe to the program; for more information and fundraising materials, please contact:

Matthew Mixon
(414) 410-9927
matt@mixonmedia.com

Janus Adams
(212) 561-0966
show@janusadams.com