

About Jason K. Johnson

I graduated from William Paterson University in Wayne, NJ (2002), where I earned a B.A. Degree in Psychology with a minor in Fine Arts. Upon graduation, I worked for a therapeutic preschool that served children ages 3-6 diagnosed with ADHD, Oppositional Defiance Disorder, Autism Disorder, Separation Anxiety, and severe emotional/behavioral difficulties.

In 2005-2007, I pursued my M.S.W. from Rutgers University. During my internships, I worked in a substance abuse program for teens at a hospital, where I provided individual/group treatment for teens ages 14-19, all mandated by the court system.

I also interned for an agency providing individual, group, and family therapy for children ages 3-12 who come from homes affected by domestic violence. Upon graduation, I was hired by the agency that offered my second internship placement, and I remained there as a full-time clinician from 2007-2014.

As an LCSW, I started The In-Home Parent Coach® in 2009. Since 2015, I have worked solely for my company. For almost 10 years, I have worked with boys and girls (ages 2-18) with severe emotional and behavioral issues from various ethnic backgrounds, races, and religions. I have personally provided services in over 200 homes, and I continue to work within home environments today.
