

Television in the 1950s

Television came of age in the 1950s. As the number of sets nationwide skyrocketed, studios scrambled to figure out what American viewers wanted to see. Join historian Leslie Goddard to look back at the shows that captivated viewers in this decade, including situational comedies, game shows, soap operas and westerns. We'll explore how these shows both reflected and helped shape the societal landscape in this pivotal era.

