

Believe

I could sing you the one about heartbreak.
Render a stark, cold refrain.
Sing you one about loneliness
So empty you can almost feel the pain.
Sing you the one about leaving,
Or the one about old what's her name.
But whenever I stop singing,
Everything will still be the same.

Or, I could sing you a love song
So sweetly it'll bring a tear to your eye.
Sing you a song about lost love,
Or sing one from days gone by.
And, you can turn the music up loud.
It sounds better for a little while,
But whenever I stop singing,
We all still have to get by.

I could sing you one that we all love
Flood us with memories
Or sing one that we all know
Fill this room with energy
And we can all sing along
It feels good and will make us smile
But whenever we stop singing

Love is all you need
Somebody said that
Love is all you need
I said that

You gotta believe in something
I believe in love
You gotta believe in something
I believe in love
