Biography

Richard J. Sambuchi, formerly of Bad Axe, passed away August 25th with his 3 daughters by his side. Richard was born and raised in Framingham, MA, and completed his undergraduate degree from Boston College. Upon graduation, Richard completed USAF officers training school where he then achieved the rank of Captain. He was stationed at the Port Austin Airforce Base where he met his future wife, Mary Amos. Shortly thereafter, Richard and Mary relocated to Ann Arbor where Richard received his degree in dentistry from the University of Michigan. After graduation, Richard went on to practice in Bad Axe with his father-in-law, Russell Amos. Richard proudly practiced dentistry for 30 years; his staff and patients were his extended family. In his later years, Richard spent time between his houses in Port Austin and Fort Myers. He also looked forward to Michigan football games with life-long friends, watching Boston sports, attending his grandchildrens' sporting events, taking part in church, and spending holidays with family.
