President's Message

Happy Fall everyone!!!!

I hope you all had a great summer filled with amazing memories and fun! As much as I love the summer the "ber" months are my ultimate favorite time of year. I love the excitement of school being in session and receiving our new boxes of curriculum, new crayons, paints, paper and the order of school days. Just as we get into the amazing world of teaching the children their regular lessons we get to incorporate Halloween, the Harvest and everything that makes September and October amazing into our lesson plans! Sheer awesomeness!!!

A great place to go on field trips is the Pumpkin Patch at Tanaka Farms in Irvine:

Training tip: Keeping yourself informed and current is just as important as educating your young charges if not more important. Monday, September 11th will be our General Meeting and Southern California Child Care Advocate Jane Cong - Huyen will be presenting current and upcoming changes to Title 22 Regulations. The meeting will be from 6:50 pm to 9:00 pm at Quail Hill Community Center 39 Shady Canyon Dr, Irvine, CA 92603. Please make sure you are there!

I hope you all are enjoying the last days of summer and looking forward to some cooler weather! Fall season is a beautiful time of year and a great way to start out fresh for the new school year as well. It's also a good time to check your fire extinguisher and smoke detector batteries to make sure you are safe and in compliance. By now you are all aware of our upcoming General Meeting on September 11th with DSS which is also a mandatory meeting for all of us. Please get the word out to all your providers concerning the importance of this meeting. We work hard to help each other maintain, within our daycares, all the rules and regulations as well as new changes we need to be well aware of as professional childcare providers. I look forward to a great season ahead of us filled with positive feedback and ideas!

National Preparedness Month

This September, National Preparedness Month (NPM) will focus on planning, with an overarching theme "Disasters Don't Plan Ahead. You Can." We should all take action to prepare! We are all able to help first responders in our community by training how to respond during an emergency and what to do when disaster strikes — where we live, work, and visit. The goal of NPM is to increase the overall number of individuals, families, and communities that engage in preparedness actions at home, work, business, school, and place of worship.

Hello ladies. I hope all is well with your daycare! I've been getting calls for your areas so I hope you're benefiting. I know summertime can sometimes be slow but I'm certain the calls should pick-up as kids go back to school and parents start to line up care. A web page should also help if you need that extra boost and you can advertise on the OCCCA website in the referral section next to your name. Flyers are also useful. Please note the upcoming General Meeting on September 11th at 6:30 pm in Irvine at the Quail Hill Community Center off the 405 freeway. It is to your advantage to attend this particular meeting because it will inform you on what the new changes and regulations are and what is expected in your licensed childcare and a step above from hearing about it without knowing all the facts. Please call me if you have any concerns or you need a question answered!

Hello Irvine Providers!

I hope you are all having a wonderful [although very hot] summer. I have gotten a few calls in the past couple of weeks; most are looking for infant care. I am hoping the calls will pick up soon and I know you are too. I know some of you are in need of children and I am keeping that in mind. A huge Thanks to all of you that attended Vickie's Farewell Party at Mimi's Restaurant in Irvine on July 23rd we had a great turnout, lots of fun and Vickie was totally surprised! Everyone decided they liked getting together so much in this casual way we will be doing it more. Thank you to Lee and the board who joined us and presented Vickie with a nice gift card from the Orange County Child Care Association. It was great seeing so many of you at the Irvine Child Resource Center on August 3rd for the workshop on "Strengthening Family Relationships". We received some great information, a certificate of participation, lots of fun giveaways and of course tasty refreshments as usual. We are so fortunate that the City of Irvine does this for us, so if you haven't joined us before, take advantage of it in October! The next workshop is coming up on October 5th entitled "Supporting Young Children's Social Emotional Development" so plan on being there. I wanted to let you know that our next area meeting is set for Monday October 23rd at Lakeshore Learning Store in Lake Forest at 6:30 pm. It is always a fun time when we meet there! They will be presenting a workshop on Holiday Crafts for kids; of course, as always there will be shopping [with a store discount] afterwards and yummy refreshments. Don't forget the OCCCA General Meeting on Monday September 11th!

Hello ladies. I hope you are all having a successful start to the fall season in your daycare. Thank you for referring phone calls and emails back to me of prospective parents looking for childcare. Not only does your referral back to OCCCA help parents find quality care, it helps the rest of our association prosper and network as a group. Please come to the General Meeting on September 11th. We also have a South County Area meeting scheduled for October 23rd at Lakeshore in the city of Lake Forest at 6:30 pm that Joyce Russell organized for us all. Please attend this highly requested area meeting since we will be having a craft presenter and an opportunity to shop at a discounted rate after the meeting. Dessert and drinks will be available as well. I would really love to see more of the Lake Forest providers at these meetings. It really helps in our networking opportunities as an association as well as a city and it's a good way to break away and enjoy the evening free from our home and business. You deserve this time! Looking forward to seeing you all soon!

I have consistently been getting calls and have been giving out the list of providers so you should be getting calls. I have also been giving you overflow calls from other providers. I really appreciate it when you pass on your calls when you are full or cannot make it work for you or for them. I also enjoy hearing from each of you to see how things are going and to see how I can help you out. I get a lot of feedback emails from parents that are very pleased and appreciative for the email that I send to them of the list of providers. I hope you have all enjoyed your summer and hopefully have gotten to take some time off to celebrate you. Please do not forget the General meeting on September 11th. The venue has changed. Honey in Foods

Submitted by Michelle Spoor

Honey should not be given to a child under the age of 1. If you're on a food program, they don't even want you to give a child graham crackers until after the age of 2, even if honey isn't listed in the ingredients, because of the possibility that they still may contain honey.

Honey contains botulism spores. *Infant botulism is the infectious (intestinal) form of botulism, which results when swallowed spores of a particular bacterium (Clostridium botulinum) colonize the baby's large intestine and produce botulinum toxin in it. Botulinum toxin causes weakness and loss of muscle tone because it blocks the nerve ending's ability to signal the linked muscle to contract. The illness often begins with constipation but is usually first noticed as difficulty feeding (sucking and swallowing), a weak and altered cry and diminished facial expression.

Heat that is reached in the normal baking process doesn't kill the spores. After attaining the age of 1, most children have developed an immunity to the bacterium that honey contains.

Honey has become a popular substitute for the trans fats that have been removed from many baked goods. Many whole wheat products contain honey, including English muffins and bagels. I can't serve the whole wheat bread that I have used for years because they have added honey to it. Many raisin breads also contain honey. Read all labels for things that you plan on feeding to infants. Even the smallest amount of honey can lead to severe health issues in a child under 1 year of age.

Easing Transitions Within The Child Care Day

Submitted by Joyce Russell

Whether it's a transition from free play to clean-up time or from a noisy activity to a quiet time activity. Transitions can be challenging. Here are a few ideas to help.

Clean-Up Times - Warn children in advance that a transition is coming up. You might say "You need to finish up your project now, it will soon be time to clean up" or you can make it fun by saying "Let's pretend that we're all giant vacuum cleaners picking up the toys" Make a vacuum cleaner sound and begin picking up. The children will soon join in.

Another way to involve the children is to begin singing a clean-up song. An easy one I use is "Clean-up, clean-up everybody everywhere, clean-up. Clean-up everybody do your share" and before you know it... it's all done and you're ready to move on to the next activity.

Moving from Noisy to Quiet Activities - Songs work well for this kind of transition. If the children need to settle down for a story or circle time, you can begin a chanting song such as "I bend and touch my toes. I stand up straight and tall. I sit down on the floor. And make myself so small" The children will need to listen to hear what they should do next, so quieting will come naturally.

Getting Ready to go Outdoors - On a cold day, you might use colors as a way to get children started putting on their coats by saying "Everyone with a red shirt can go get their coat on." Another way could be to set a timer and see who can get their coat on before it rings. Keep this fun so it doesn't become too competitive.

Waiting for Parents to Arrive - Some children have anxiety at the end of the day when it's time for parents to arrive. This is especially true if a child is the last to leave. You'll want to have some quiet activities available to distract children during this time. Puzzles, books, blocks are always good or even watching a favorite video together. Very often I use this time for a final light snack such as cheese or crackers with a drink.

7 Habits of a Successful Early Childhood Educator

Written by Emily Marie at Childcare at Best

Submitted by: Diane Palermo

Working with young children is a rewarding opportunity. Watching them learn and grow is worth the sometimes long hours and consistent planning. As Educators, we wish to do our best for the children we work with. Below are 7 Habits of Successful Early Childhood Educators... because the little faces that brighten our day deserve us at our best!

Be Prepared

Each morning you should know what your game plan is for the day. If you, as the Educator are prepared, the day goes a lot smoother for everyone. If you've worked with children for any length of time, you know that things rarely go as planned. Having your activity prepared and set up for the children beforehand will go a long ways in making sure your activity runs a little smoother. Young children are still developing patience. Expecting a group of children to wait 10 minutes while you run around like a chicken with your head cut off collecting items for your craft time, well, that's just asking for trouble. Do as much as possible for the day ahead so can relax and enjoy the activity with the children.

Be Aware

A successful ECE is aware of the classroom, and of each individual child's needs. Planning with this knowledge in mind is a must for aiding children in reaching their full potential. You may note that a child who is advanced in one area needs to be challenged a little more than the other children in the group to expand their learning. How can you accommodate them? should be a question you ask. One child may be struggling with learning a new skill, such as using scissors. With this in mind, in your planning, you can make sure there are more opportunities for the child to continue practicing.

You need to have eyes in the back of your head when working with young children. Well, this doesn't always come first off, you need to be aware that you need to know where ALL children are at ALL times and that they are safe.

Be a Walking Resource

Yup. This one is pretty important. In the Early Childhood field, it can change the whole mood of the day to pull out one of these tricks. What tricks am I talking about, you ask? Why the countless action songs, fingerplays, games, and stories you've memorized and filed away in your brain. Having the ability to sing a simple song about the task at hand can help children focus and cut down on unwelcome behaviors. Just think of the tonne of washing hand and clean up songs that are out there to learn. Waiting is particularly difficult for young children, so having a simple story or game to play (Follow the Leader, or Eye Spy work great) helps the time pass a faster and keeps spirits high.

Continue Growing

Professional Development is key for any Successful Educator. Attending workshops and seminars on Early Learning inspires us to grow and to try new things in our early learning environments. Bring a pen and pad of paper along to jot down any new ideas you would like to include in your planning. Record any helpful websites suggested or write down the email of a child care centre you would like to keep in contact with. Keeping a journal of workshops you've attended is a wonderful way remind yourself of all those great ideas down the road a few months. Where I live, Professional Development is a requirement in the ECE field. Participating with a willingness to learn goes a long way towards becoming the best you can be as an educator.

Networking with other educator is helpful, as we are able to fire up our passion for this field, support each other, and learn helpful tips along the way.

Have the Difficult Conversations

With coworkers, with parents, and with the community at large. When we signed up for a job in the early childhood sphere, it did not occur to most of us, that we also signed up as advocates for the children we work with. We are their voice in a society that they are just beginning learning about. They do not yet have the means to advocate for themselves, so it's up to us. Speak up, speak out and have those difficult conversations that you know will improve the lives of the children in your care.

Document, Document, Document

Keeping records of children throughout the day is a big part of our role as educators. Finding a way to include parents in this process can be challenging. Often times, our work schedules do not allow for a set time for documentation. Simplify is key. Take a minute to snap a few pictures of the children's activities. Write a certificate when a child reaches a goal. Make a display of children's artwork. Having items such as a classroom use camera, multi purpose certificate, pens, and tape in easy to assess (for the teachers, not the children

Take your Time

Ok, this one speaks to me a lot. I enjoy spending time with children doing a messy art activity, or building a skyscraper in the block area. But, constantly running through the back of my mind is the list of tasks I still need to accomplish. Diapering, cleaning, snack prep... we, as educators, are busy. However, when I'm thinking about these things, I tend to rush the children through their process of play. The most enjoyable days are the ones when I let go and let things role.... without my eye constantly on the clock!

Find Time Savers

This is huge. There are so many ways to cut down on the little tasks throughout out day. Layering paper on the art easel, so when one child is finished, there's a fresh paper underneath ready to go. Having a bowl filled with warm water and facecloths ready to go after a messy lunch. Simply having logical places for things you use often with make your life a whole lot easier.
