

Jaeva's breakout session at Law Society's LMS Finance & Business Forum

We're honoured to join the line-up of inspirational speakers at the Law Society's Law Management Section Finance and Business Forum on 2nd November in London.

Our Managing Director, Nicola Moore-Miller, is hosting a mid-afternoon breakout session titled "IT software - reducing costs and improving service". In today's ever more challenging market, these two factors are critical to success for busy law firms.

As the title suggests, Nicola and Jaeva's Client Services Director, Jo-Anne Wild, will discuss how to use and identify the right technology for your business which will allow you to reduce business costs and improve efficiency whilst at the same time delivering a higher level of client service.

The workshop-style session will provide practical examples of how IT can facilitate this and promote group discussion on past experience and overcoming the barriers to change.

Jaeva's approach to successful project delivery is underpinned by a firm belief that IT cannot be viewed in isolation. People, process and technology have to work together to achieve the best results.

Utilising some of the proven methodologies such as Lean and Six Sigma, more traditionally used in manufacturing as opposed to service industries, can also add much value to the change management process.
