Something Old....

Gone are the 10 old wood lighting poles that seem to always be between your line of sight and the playing field.

Gone are the dangerous 13,200 volts of overhead wiring.

Gone are the old incandescent fixtures that only produced about 8 footcandle power on the playing field.

Something New....

Six new 100-foot steel poles set behind the bleachers, to provide an unobstructed view of the playing field.

New underground wiring, eliminating the danger of overhead wiring.

Facts about new lighting . . .

Twenty-one Metal Halide 1,000-watt fixtures and one incandescent light per pole.

126,000 total watts produce 50 candlefoot power on the playing field--enough for television cameras.

Each pole will withstand winds in excess of 100 miles per hour.

The base of each pole measures 12' x 12' x 9'; contains 50 yards of concrete and 6 anchor bolts, each measuring 2" in diameter and 8' long.

New stadium lighting for 2007

nearly 30 years of service, the field lighting at Hunter Dwellley Stadium is scheduled for replacement prior to the beginning of the 2007 season. The picture above comes from a Jenks football game program insert. The new lighting is state of the art and provides improved energy efficiency and lighting performance for televised and non-televised games. The project complements the recently completed Sharp Health and Fitness Center.

Hunter-Dwelley

Hunter-Dwelley Stadium is named after two former Jenks athletes? On Thanksgiving Day, 1929, the first Jenks Alumni Association dedicated the Jenks athletic field after, Francis Hunter and Charles Dwelley. Hunter and Dwelley were considered both great players and great individuals by their classmates. Hunter and Dwelley passed away prior to graduating their senior years in 1921 and Francis Hunter is the football player furthest to the left in the 1921 team picture. More information on the history of Jenks can be found in the book titled, Tune of the Hickory Stick, by Joyce Nichols.

Robert L. Sharp Health & Fitness Center

Robert L. Sharp cuts the ribbon, opening the new Jenks Health and Fitness Center, named in his honor. As a former Jenks Coach, administrator and teacher, Mr. Sharp played a huge role in the lives of many former Trojans, who to this day still call him, "Mr. Sharp".
