WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW WHEN GROWING ALFALFA.

Alfalfa produces a toxin, which is called autotoxicity. This prevents germination and growth of new alfalfa seedlings. A few key tips to remember:

With the initial planting, you want to make sure that any alfalfa that has been grown on that land has been killed off for at least 1 year. You will want to start with a weed free area as well. Do a soil test, to make sure your land is properly fertilized and your pH level is adequate to grow Alfalfa. For best results, your pH level should be between 6.5 - 7.0. You should also fertilize annually. After you have planted, you may re-seed patchy areas within the same season of planting. The toxin increases with age & density, so you never want to reseed Alfalfa over existing alfalfa, beyond the first season.

Even though Alfalfa is a perennial, the weather may cause patchy or dead areas (winter kill). If this happens, it is not a total loss, you may over-seed those areas with a Versa Grass mix; Brome, Timothy, Orchard Grass & Rye. This will make a good hay. If you are growing Alfalfa for Food Plots, over-seeding with clover will complement the Alfalfa, for a deer pleasing treat.

Food Plot 101:

Routine
Soil Sample $16
Results back in about 1 week

Spring is fast approaching. Now is the time to get your soil samples in, so you can plan what you want to plant and have time to get your soil ready for optimum conditions. Stop by to pick up the soil collection bags with complete instructions. Pay for the tests when you drop your soil off. Please note: there is a form to fill out that is associated with your samples that will ask about fertilizer that was applied over the last year. How many acres or square feet in each plot. Does the land have a slope? If so, how many degrees. What do you plan on planting? If you ask someone else to drop the sample(s) off for you, please make sure they have the information to complete the form. The better the information you supply, the better your results will be.
