Both, built by Mr. Godfried Schock, are the only Tudor style houses on the island. The facade of this side-gabled building is dominated by a steeply pitched central dormer, an eave-wall brick chimney, and an enclosed hip-roofed porch. The porch is supported by coursed rubble limestone columns. Windows are casement type and feature dressed
43. History and Significance This house was built of local glacial erratics by Godfried Schock in 1936. The owner and builder received the land on which the house sits as payment for the construction of an identical house immediately to the south for William C. Schlesselman (ERI-1569). The island stone mason for many years, Mr. Schock also built the unique summer residence on
44. Description of Environment and Outbuildings The house is located on the fringe of the island business district. Overgrown fields lie to the east. A 28x40' concrete block garage, added in 1955 sits to the northeast of the house.
