Are You at Your Wits End? Try Psalm 77

The SEVENTY-SEVENTH PSALM provides invaluable insight for the troubled saint on how to deal with times of discouragement or even overwhelming despondency. When God seems the most distant, and spiritual peace and joy are only a faint memory, action must be taken! Many times, dejected believers frequently seek solutions which flagrantly disregard what the Bible has to say, in favor of what worldly wisdom claims will work.

However, the restoration of right fellowship with the Lord will inevitably turn our time of deepest woe into a season of praise. The Psalmist found this to be true; so will we. It is easy to think that a change in circumstances, or the removal of whatever or whoever is seemingly causing our distress, will provide relief. Not so! Although we may not believe that a SPIRIT-WROUGHT REVIVAL is God's remedy, that is exactly what we so desperately need—a renewal of the presence and power of the Savior. This blessed psalm provides wisdom that is specifically fitted for the believer who has reached rock bottom and wants God's way out.

Yes, there is heaviness of spirit for a season, but joy unspeakable and full of glory is still the portion of those who look to God with the eye of faith.
