

Information from Billy Meier via Christian Frehner today April 9, 2020, (slightly reworded)

1 - In the beginning, there should have been a total shut down of the economy apart from nutrition, medicine, energy, and garbage sectors for 3 to 8 months in China, in order to stop the then epidemic at its source. For now, the longer and more strict a shut down, and the more that people observe the regulations, the fewer deaths, etc. will occur and this will better slow down the spreading of the pandemic.

Actually the pandemic already exists in ALL countries on our planet (not in most, as is claimed), and many countries are not sharing information about the real numbers. Actually there are already 9 to 10 times more infected people than is reported.

2 - It COULD BE the case that up to 1/2 billion = 500 million will die from this virus during the pandemic if it is not halted by taking the necessary strict and effective measures. There are already more than 9 billion people overcrowding the planet, and if only a small percentage of the infected people die, this will add up to a huge number.

3 - Bodies after death can carry the virus for a long time, so for the time being cremation is recommended if the dead corpses cannot be buried in a city or crowded area. On the other hand there may arise problems when the crematoriums cannot process the great number of corpses. Then mass graves are a possibility, but these need land that is currently used for agricultural purposes, etc.
