THANKS FOR BEING GOOD NEIGHBOURS

Let's all remember to take the time to check in on our neighbours to ensure their needs are being met.

The fewer of us out right now, the better, especially those at greater risk from the virus.

If you're able to assist or run an errand for a neighbor or someone in our community, while you're out and about, it is a super helpful way to give back.

THINKING ABOUT HEADING TO THE CABIN ...

Health Officials urge against heading to the cottage to isolate during the COVID-19 event. This could be catastrophic for small communities who do not have capacity to manage during this crisis!

There may also be supply-chain issues to consider. Retailers across the country have found it difficult to keep food, cleaning supplies and other highly-demanded products on their shelves. For stores in remote areas that are used to serving small populations at this time of year, a sudden influx of cottagers can make it even more difficult to meet the needs of their year-round customers.
