

What's your next move?

There are five large predators remaining in North America that pose a real threat to the average outdoor enthusiast who is engaged in hunting, fishing, camping, or just enjoying the great outdoors. Would you know what to do when encountering one? Think you know what to do? You'd better know because your next move could be deadly, for you, if it's not the right move.

"Entering the World of the Predator" by John and Heidi Rao will prepare you for that chance encounter, should it occur.

John and Heidi collectively have worked for Texas Parks and Wildlife for 40 years, and have traveled from the Pacific Northwest to the Amazon rainforest and many points in between fishing, camping and hiking. Respected by their peers and considered experts in their field, their book is a must read for all outdoor enthusiasts. Order at northamericanoutdoors.org or call 281-435-0569.
