

Morgan Malone is an idea engineer, expert in people-centered systems design, and dedicated Southside resident. Hailing from Old Dominion University, Morgan majored in Women's Studies and has since held positions across the civic landscape. She has formerly completed research at a global research foundation centered around democracy, developed local unions as a union organizer throughout the state of Illinois, and as a field director, created outreach plans for varying campaigns.

Passionate about community development, capacity building, and creating pipelines for opportunity for underserved communities, Morgan has devoted her career and personal time to doing just that. She is currently the Project Manager over the Englewood Quality of Life Plan (EQLP), a visionary ten year community development strategy, with Teamwork Englewood. The EQLP is a resident designed, led, and implemented strategy focused on the wellness areas of Housing & Public Spaces, Health & Wellness, Jobs & Economic Development, Public Safety, and Education & Youth Development.

For more information on the Englewood Quality of Life Plan go to bit.ly/FullEQLP.