Coming this OCTOBER!!!

By Greg Plante: Editor, Sunrise Press

Folks, I'm very well aware of the typos I had in the last issue of the newsletter, mainly concerning dates, and I am truly sorry to the nth degree for the confusion. I figure it to be the reason for the low registration numbers so far. But you can take THIS issue to the proverbial bank. So, get registered and get ready for a good time.

Get ready to enjoy some fun and fellowship! That's right, it time already to plan for the upcoming reunion this fall in MEMPHIS, TN. Home of the Blues, and more music history than you can shake a stick at (as they say).

Our accommodations will be at the downtown Springhill Suites (by Marriott), beginning September 6th and culminating in our always anticipated Banquet the evening of September 8th.

In between, there will be plenty of time in the hospitality suite where we can enjoy beverages and snacks and swap untold sea stories (and those often told as well) and even a few "you aren't gonna believe this, but" stories that we sailors are quite familiar with telling folks.

There's a Mojo Tour with a wonderful tour guide who, along with telling you about the sites you're seeing, has plenty of songs to share with you as the tour goes on. It is a well enjoyed tour by any who have been on it. While on the tour, there will be a stop for lunch at an All You Can Eat BBQ Buffet. Followed by a stop at the Rock and Soul Museum, as well as a memorial service for those of our members that have gone to their final muster.

We look forward to seeing you there, so check out the details inside this issue of the Sunrise Press, and plan to attend. You'll be glad you did. It is always a great time when we get together!

Greeting my brothers and sisters of the USS Lexington

Hello, my fellow shipmates. As we get closer to our reunion, I am concerned because it seems as if the excitement is not there. I as well as the board members have are aware of the grim report that only two have signed up for the trip to Memphis as of now. I do understand that things are tight for families and plans cannot be set in stone because we do not know what tomorrow holds.

Being a part of this Lexington association has been the greatest joy; I look forward to spending four days with each of you as we catch up and share. We have not forgotten our goal for growth as well as reaching out to those that have not participated in our reunion. Memphis offers us picturesque beauty, landmarks to visit and great food while we enjoy each other's company as we look back in retrospect embracing our years of service. We are family and I look forward to seeing smiling faces as we prepare for Memphis.

We have taken into consideration the days, so we shaved off a day and we found that the prices we have are comfortable. So, let us start packing and get ready to enjoy food, fun and family. I will see you in Memphis.

Fraternally yours

An item of interest

From the Editor: Greg Plante

Most of you all know me after all of these years I've been in the Association, and enjoy making the Sunrise Press every 4 months. Well, a full time job of 60 or so hours a week mixed with various health concerns I'm working through, make trying to keep up with the Press and giving you, my shipmates, a product worthy of USS Lexington standards is to the point of being almost impossible.

I'm putting before you, a request that anyone with moderate computer skills and a little creativity consider taking this task over. (You will need MS Office 365 to run Publisher, to match my current format... at least to start. Mailouts are easy... The Mail Chimp app we use does 90% of it for you, and I may even be able to do that part for you.

If it's so easy, why am I not wanting to stay on to do it? Well, in short, about 60hrs a week as an Over-The-Road truck driver, doesn't leave a lot of extra time. But add to that my few days off are often taken up with various doctor visits, a few hospital stays, etc and you can see how that makes things difficult.

So..... If you've always (or at least often) thought you might want to be a bigger part of the Association and participate in it's future, I would ask you to contemplate this. You have a shipmate in serious need of some help. The Newsletter is published 3 times/yr; the one that takes up the most time is March... That is the one that requires the most time. I have to gather the reunion info from various sources and put it in a format that is easy to follow and understand, as well as look nice. Going on a tour of a certain place? Go online and find some pics of it, and things like that. July... that's mostly a repeat of the March issue with just a few changes of "filler" articles to take up vacant spaces. It goes quickly. November, not so bad either. It's just a recap of the last reunion. Business meeting minutes, pics of folks enjoying the heck out of themselves at the reunion, things like that. There are plenty of folks that can supply the photos you need.

So... There you have it. It's a great opportunity to leave your mark on the association. I've brought it a long way from the 8-10 zeroxed pages stapled in the top corner to what it is now. But there is plenty of room for a fresh look thru different eyes. Please consider this opportunity to serve your shipmates. Drop me a line with questions, and I'll get in touch with you.

In My E-mail.....

From: John Reistra
Subj: Plank Owner Story

Greetings! I am 87 years old. In 1955, at 17 (70 years ago), I went to boot camp in San Diego, CA I was assigned to the USS Lexington and rode the USS Boxer to Bremerton, WA in 1955 to help put the Lexington in commission. I was in the 2nd Division. I was one of the many other sailors who were assigned to put the ship in commission. We did so in 1955, and got assigned to San Diego. We made our first cruise to the Pacific in 1956. I spent 4 years on board and within that time I switched divisions from 2nd to S3. I spent my last two years on board in S3 division. Our first cruise, we had someone that didn't want to go to Japan. He sabotaged one of our variants to another prop. We ended up at Yokosuka, Japan at the US Naval Shipyard. Another incident was when the Captain had to announce to all of us that we were in the eye of a hurricane. That was very suspenseful Ocean water completely flooded over our flight deck. After the Lexington I shipped over to the USS Midway, and I put in 6 years on her. I am hoping that I can get a piece of the planks of the Lexington. I would also love to get a hat with CVA 16 on it. I was either the first or second person who got to be at the helm of Lexington on it's first trip for the hour watch. That was so exciting!

Trump to launch new White House office focused on shipbuild-

By: Leo Shane III

As part of his sweeping national address on Tuesday night, President Donald Trump promised to establish a new office of shipbuilding within the White House to revitalize the industry and bolster American naval strength.

The vow — which came during the national security section of Trump's nearly two-hour speech — was included among broader plans to "boost our defense industrial base" for America.

"We are also going to resurrect the American shipbuilding industry, including commercial shipbuilding and military shipbuilding," Trump said, eliciting applause from Republican lawmakers in the House chamber for the address.

"We used to make so many ships. We don't make them anymore very much, but we're going to make them very fast, very soon. It will have a huge impact to further enhance our national security."

Trump also promised "special tax incentives to bring this industry home" but did not offer any more specifics. The White House did not immediately provide any other details of what the new office will oversee or who will lead the effort.

Last month, during the confirmation hearing for John Phelan, Trump's pick to serve as Navy Secretary, Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Roger Wicker, R-Miss., lamented that "just about every major U.S. shipbuilding program is behind schedule, over budget or irreparably off track."

He called for a complete overhaul of Navy shipbuilding goals and processes.

"We must stabilize shipbuilding programs, adopt commercial best practices and incentivize the shipyards to address workforce and productivity issues in a collaborative rather than combative manner," Wicker said. "And we can quickly inject innovation into naval procurement, particularly on unmanned ships."

Phelan voiced support for that approach, but he did not mention any specifics related to the new White House office.

Earlier this year, officials from the Congressional Budget Office said the Navy would need to spend more than $40 billion annually for 30 years for the U.S. Navy to fulfill its proposed plans to expand its battle force fleet.

There are currently 295 battle force ships in the fleet, with that number expected to drop to 283 ships by 2027 because of planned retirements. The service has stated it hopes to grow the fleet to 381 ships by 2054.

The new shipbuilding office would be a direct counter to the Chinese shipbuilding industry, the largest in the world. Industry officials estimate that Chinese firms have built nearly half of the world's merchant vessels, and the country has publicly invested heavily in their own naval build-up.

In Tuesday's speech, Trump also promised to build a new missile defense shield to protect America and continue other military reforms to strengthen the armed forces.

In a statement after the speech, officials from the Shipbuilders Council of America praised the announcement.

"Since the founding days of our nation, the U.S. shipyard industry and industrial base has played a central role in national and domestic security, and remains steadfast in its commitment to maintaining our nation's security vessels while building the fleet of the future," said Matthew Paxton, president of the group. "By fully utilizing the existing domestic shipyard capacity, the shipyard industrial base can meet the growing demands of national defense, restore American competitiveness, and create thousands of skilled jobs in communities across the nation."

How a 'Dauntless' dive bomber became a WWII ace at Coral Sea

By Jon Guttman

When one thinks of U.S. Navy aircraft carrier operations in the months leading up to the Battle of Midway, one name that readily comes to mind is Lt. Edward "Butch" O'Hare, the F4F-3 Wildcat pilot whose five aerial victories in defense of the carrier Lexington on Feb. 20, 1942, made him both the Navy's first World War II fighter ace and its first WWII aviator to receive the Medal of Honor.

Meanwhile, hard on O'Hare's heels in Lexington lore was a Douglas SBD-3 Dauntless team whose activities seemed just as much devoted to fighters as to dive bombers.

John Arthur Leppla was born in Lima, Ohio, on May 7, 1916. After graduating from Purdue University, he enlisted in the Navy in September 1940, and went on to qualify as an aviator with an ensign's commission. In 1941, he joined scout squadron VS-2, flying SBDs from the Lexington.

Leppla's usual "back-seater," Aviation Radioman 3rd Class John Liska, was born in Coalville, Pennsylvania, on Aug. 28, 1922.

The first indication that the two were a natural team occurred on March 10, 1942, two days after a Japanese naval force occupied Lae and Salamaua harbors in northern New Guinea, when the Lexington and Yorktown struck back in the first raid of the war by two U.S. carriers.

The surprise attack caught Japanese forces without air support except for eight reconnaissance seaplanes, two of which tried to engage the U.S. bombers until they were brought down by Wildcat fighters.

The U.S. bombers sank a number of Japanese ships, in addition to damaging multiple other vessels. Of the 104 carrier planes involved in the raid, only one SBD from Leppla's scout squadron VS-2 and its crew were lost to antiaircraft fire.

For their part in the raid, Leppla and Liska were awarded the Navy Cross.

Battle of the Coral Sea

Two months later, in May 1942, the Japanese launched Operation MO, an offensive to seize Port Moresby, New Guinea.

The invasion force was escorted by the heavy cruisers Aoba, Furutaka, Kinugasa and Kako, and the light carrier Shoho. Fleet carriers Shokaku and Zuikaku offered mobile support.

On May 7, 1942, Shokaku's and Zuikaku's D3A1 dive bombers sank the U.S. destroyer Sims and so badly damaged the fleet tanker Neosho that it was scuttled a few days later. Elsewhere, however, the Lexington and Yorktown set out to intercept enemy threats. The carriers located Shoho and dispatched 53 SBDs, 22 TBD-1 Devastator torpedo bombers and 18 F4F-3s to eliminate it.

The Japanese light carrier's hangar sheltered eight A6M2 Zeros, four A5M4 fighters and six B5N2 torpedo bombers, but it had only one Zero and two A5M4s in the air on combat air patrol when the Americans attacked off Misima Island. The first Americans on the scene were SBDs of Leppla's scout squadron VS-2, led by Lt. Cmdr. Robert Dixon. As they positioned themselves to dive from 12,500 feet, the first echelon came under attack. Dixon extended his dive brakes, causing enemy forces to overshoot. Two Zeros then went after an SBD crewed by Leppla and Liska, but Liska drove them off with his .30-caliber machine gun.

As a third Zero attacked the SBD in front of him, Leppla briefly rolled, fired and saw the Japanese disengage. He then resumed his dive, registering a near miss with his 1,000-pound bomb.

Their squadron mates, Lt. j.g. William Edward Hall and Seaman 1st Class John Moore, were more successful in bombing the Japanese carrier Shoho.

Although Shoho launched three more fighters, it could not stop U.S. aircraft from landing as many as 13 bombs and seven torpedo hits in less than one hour when it went down — the first Japanese carrier sunk in the war.

As the U.S. planes returned to their carriers, Dixon reported to the Lexington: "Scratch one flat top! Signed Bob."

Three SBDs of VS-2 and one from Yorktown's VS-5 were shot down, while their crews claimed a total of five Zeros and one A5M4, though the Japanese denied any air-to-air losses among their fighters.

Leppla was credited with shooting down two Japanese aircraft in 30 seconds, with two more credited to his radioman, Liska. About halfway along the 180-mile flight back to their carrier, the two encountered a Japanese reconnaissance plane, which Leppla shot down.

The next day, on May 8, 1942, the Battle of the Coral Sea reached its crescendo.

Shortly before 11 a.m., the Lexington's radar detected Japanese forces from 64 miles out. With most of their Wildcats escorting the strike on the Japanese carriers, only 17 remained to defend the American carriers, so their numbers were supplemented with 18 available SBDs from the scouting squadrons, including Leppla and Liska's squadron mates, Hall and Moore.

Japanese torpedo bombers had an escort of their own, and three picked out Hall's plane. A 20mm round entered his cockpit, wounding Hall in both ankles and nearly severing his right foot.

Still, Hall stayed in the fight, firing at any opponent that passed before his sights.

Noticing Hall's plight, Leppla and Liska intervened, with the two claiming four Zeros in the process.

In reality, Japanese forces lost one fighter whose pilot ditched. The SBDs, however, were credited with downing a Japanese D3A dive bomber and five B5N torpedo bombers.

Although the Battle of the Coral Sea ended in a tactical victory for Japan, the U.S. had turned back a major Japanese invasion attempt. Moreover, while Shokaku underwent repairs and Zuikaku replaced its airplane and aircrew losses, Yorktown's damage was repaired in time to join in the decisive U.S. victory at Midway on June 4, 1942.

After sorting out the air-to-air claims at Coral Sea, Hall was credited with one enemy plane, while Leppla was credited with a Zero and a floatplane destroyed and two Zeros damaged on May 7, followed by two Zeros downed and one damaged on the 8th. Liska was credited with three Zeros.

Their outstanding performance resulted in a gold star in lieu of a second Navy Cross for Leppla and Liska. On Nov. 21, 1942, Hall was awarded the Medal of Honor.

The Cold Within

Greetings in the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ,

Being a Pastor, I often hear those that belong to not only the church where I Pastor but often in the community as well. I overhear men and women sharing their concerns whether God listens to them or not and whether they should question God's actions.

You know the Word of God gives us to know that there is nothing that we will go through that God has not addressed it in His word. The Bible is our manual on how to operate in this broken vessel while following God in His complete holiness. So, I was reading the other night out of the book of Habakkuk. This book is found in the Old Testament. Habakkuk found himself complaining to God that he sees sinful violence on every hand, yet no punishment is visited upon the evildoers. He receives a reply from God; however, it is hard for him to embrace. Yet he recognizes God's providence and Holiness as well as righteous.

God receives his children daily in prayer. When you find yourself going through something that is fine. God is just as concern as you are and if it bothers you, it bothers Him. All He desires from you is that you invite Him into your situation. Into your heartache, or the part of your life that you cannot seem to forgive and forget. You can ask God to give you an understanding of why you are going through.

The Lord is our father, I asked my earthly dad a lot of questions when I was a child. You can ask our father why you are going through some things in life. He will tell you and give you comfort as He shares with you.

So, in your downtime read Habakkuk and James read all of chapter one.

Yours In Service

Chaplain Christopher Hagger ThM

I didn't write this poem It was written by James Patrick Kinney in the Mid 1970's. It was read the other day on the Senate floor, and as I read it now my heart is heavy with sadness and grief. America is so polarized, I am afraid for my country. We are not on the same side anymore, we have different views of what we think our country should be. Oh, how I pray that we would learn to pray again. Please Lord bless American. We just need to Love again.
