

Granite

Granite is easier in terms of classification. It is an igneous rock having crystals or grains of visible size and consists mainly of quartz, feldspar, and mica or other colored minerals. Whereas other stones have three different classifications, granite used in the building industry has only one. It must be at least 160 pounds per cubic foot and have a water absorption rate of 0.40 percent or less.