Gospel: Jn 13: 31-33, 34-35.

"A New Heaven and A New Earth"

The Book of Revelation speaks to those who look to God for a comfort that only God can give. It is a prophetic book urging us to listen carefully to the Word of God and stay faithful to the covenant God has made with us in Christ. Today's passage presents us with a powerful promise of "a new heaven and a new earth," and if there was ever a time for God to "make all things new" now is the moment.

"Loving one another" is based on the knowledge that, despite the apparent victories of evil in our world, good will overcome this evil in the end and those who have persevered and lived faithful lives will be rewarded. If we take seriously the "new commandment" that Jesus leaves us, we will have to keep examining the quality of our love, to see if it really reflects the kind of unselfish love that He spoke about and lived by. When Jesus says "Love another as I have loved you", it sounds deceptively simple and easy. But when we measure our love of God and neighbor against that "simple" rule, we find that we fall far short of that ideal most at the time.

Yet this is the heart of the Gospel message - the foundation stone of our Christian faith. Love is a gift of God. When we learn to love, we experience God and our love only reflects God when it is not focused on self but on others. Our love is only God-like when it is given unconditionally, without being earned and when it seeks no return. Only then will the transformation be complete — all things will be made new and we will see a "new heaven and a new earth."
