

Georgia transplants help animal shelter

Tracy Berry is from Douglasville, Ga., and says next year she will move to Wedowee. She has helped shelters in her area before and wanted to get involved in helping Randolph County Animal Shelter.

She has friends who like to help also. Kim and Denny Hicks moved to Wedowee a few months back and helped get up donations, and they even made a dog bed out of PVC pipe and material. They had several other friends who helped get supplies together for RCAS.

They brought food, litter, cleaning supplies, office supplies, books for the book sale, and linens. They plan on doing this as often as they can. Tracy, Kim and Denny are sweet, and the RCAS staff can see the passion they have for the animals there. They will be going around getting up more donations the shelter truly needs. There is no donation too big or small when it comes to the animals at the shelter.

(From left) Tracy Berry and Kim Hicks dropped off a large amount of donations for Randolph County Animal Shelter.

The shelter staff is appreciative of all the donations received for the shelter. They were so excited as it was like Christmas for them to get a truck full of supplies. They know the animals are going to love their treats and new bedding.

It's a great feeling when our neighbor state of Georgia has people who will pitch in to help a shelter in Alabama.