Extracts from Chapters Body Text:

Foreword

“The Holy Grail for a perfect life, if only we knew what it is, the steps to the Promised Land of happiness, milk, and honey. The Universe has bestowed upon us - Time and Life, our Brains and Consciousness, caused the Human Soul and Outpourings of Emotions, and precipitated an insatiable desire for Facts and Information. And now the information available to us in today’s world is literally limitless. Today’s world has become more unfathomable, incomprehensible, and overwhelming. Our way of life is becoming consumed by the fireworks of Artificial Intelligence, the Internet of Things, Technology Adoption, Big Data, Cloud Computing, and Artificial Large Language Models (LLM’s) with whom we can now relate, communicate, and co-create just about anything.

Learning how to ‘prompt’ and use these new specialist props is becoming a preoccupation, and for some an occupation. Satellite constellations will connect us all, like it or not, to an artificial virtual world with unlimited potential and usefulness to connect to our own world. New life experiences will be available at our fingertips, and available to all; communication will be universal, and our skills and creativity will be seemingly enhanced simply by their application. But human emotions, instincts and other cognitive skills will still rule when we hit the ‘reboot’ button. Our individual personal creativity and thinking and uncertainties will remain unique and remain sought after and valued; and real singer-song writers will no doubt continue to tell us - “All you need is Love”. Love will never be more than mimicked or simulated by robots and algorithms, and ‘Life and Love’ will remain as precious as they have always been throughout time. We can thank our mothers for that.

Our restricted time on earth confines us all to a personal, miniscule lifelong experience of the world’s unfolding destiny; and just a leasehold on the value of our contribution to it. The only thing we have control over during our lives is our own personal destiny. It should not be decided in a glib moment of wandering, neither should it be left too late to determine - "This is It" - Your Personal Future. Your Mission is to find Order from Disorder and Meaning from the Essence of Time."

Part Two – Real-Life Destiny

"From the rituals of the Greeks and Egyptians to the formation of countries and culture, alcohol has lubricated the minds of some of our greatest thinkers. Alexander the Great was arguably the drunkest overachiever in history; Socrates may not have become the father of western philosophy if it hadn't been for the Ancient Greek tradition of holding drunken symposia; Benjamin Franklin was a frequently drunk Founding Father of the United States; Lord Byron maintained 'Man being reasonable must get drunk because the best of life is but intoxication'; Karl Marx was not only the man who inspired both communists and dictators everywhere but was also famous for excessive boozing, changing the course of political history along the way. Even a bastion of old English reserve and beloved matriarch of the Royal Family, the Queen Mother was known to start the day with a cocktail at noon and end with two glasses of Veuve Cliquot at dinner.

And so, the list goes on, even if in its worst manifestation it led to suicides. Ernest Hemingway drank his way around the world and wrote books that captured the emotional heartache of a generation. 'What else can change your ideas and make them run on a different plane like whisky?' And then there's Vincent van Gogh who tragically 'lost his ear'. Not just well-known celebrities, but everyday doctors, lawyers, scientists, therapists, professors, politicians, and those from every walk of life can develop so-called high-functioning alcoholism, as though alcohol and its effects are just a manageable, occupational hazard. Ultimately, however, no matter how successful they are, high-functioning alcoholics will only see their lives improve if they can manage to bring their drinking to heel.

And then it came time for our beleaguered author Greg Malpass to write his Prompt to Chat GPT, the AI counsellor. The 'Generative Pre-trained Transformer' Chat comes to the point in short order, despite reflection on its 175 billion parameters."

Part Three – Destiny and Life Choices

"But when questioned about the existence of a God, he stated that if something in him could be called religious then it was the unbounded admiration for the structure of the world so far as science can reveal it:

'The question is the most difficult in the world. It is not a question I can answer simply with yes or no. I am not an Atheist. I do not know if I can define myself as a Pantheistic. The problem involved is too vast for our limited minds. May I not reply with a parable? The human mind, no matter how highly trained, cannot grasp the universe. We are in the position of a little child, entering a huge library whose walls are covered to the ceiling with books in many different tongues. The child knows that someone must have written those books. It does not know who or how. It does not understand the languages in which they are written. The child notes a definite plan in the arrangement of the books, a mysterious order, which it does not comprehend, but only dimly suspects. That, it seems to me, is the attitude of the human mind, even the greatest and most cultured, toward God. We see a universe marvellously arranged, obeying certain laws, but we understand the laws only dimly. Our limited minds cannot grasp the mysterious force that sways the constellations.'

- Albert Einstein

The existence of God probably means nor matters little to Ants, less than many of us, but maybe even they are part of a Grand Design. Who has never marvelled at an Ant at work.

'Propped against a Beijing bar talking to a local girl, reflecting on life, I spotted a noticeably confident ant seemingly estranged from his ant colony, unusual for a member of a social group species, nevertheless seemingly going about daily business. I caught his eye and lured him to my stool. As he looked up with curiosity, I said 'Do you know we are in Communist China, a Country without a Democracy or a Monarchy, unlike the UK which has a Constitutional Monarchy and operates within a Capitalist system, plagued also by some social injustices, but as good an example of the free world as any. And all this is part of a bigger World and even bigger Universe, bigger than both you or I could imagine, even though we share some DNA?' He hesitated little in his response, 'What have you been smoking? Don't talk rubbish about things you can't see, touch or influence. I'm busy; dreamer!' Seemingly an intelligent little fellow to chat to me like that, in English despite being a Chinese ant; no doubt dedicated to his own life cause, or at least instinct, maybe all he does is in his queen's best interests, I wonder if he has a wife and children and a lover- I mused. I know little of his life, but he knows not enough of mine to be so negative. Too busy to even listen to me, nor contemplate the worthiness of my story. Not stupid maybe but certainly arrogant, and self-opinionated; maybe he's an alpha ant. Not on my wavelength though nor level of consciousness I concluded.'"

- Greg Malpass

Part Four - Sex And More Sex

"Having George Gurdjieff, a Russian philosopher, used the Enneagram Analysis of nine Personality Types to talk about three 'brains' or three centres of energy and intelligence – Feeling (Heart), Thinking (Head), and Instinctual (Body/Gut) - through which the world is primarily understood, and reactions are formulated. His view was that love can be expressed from each centre with its own quality and result.

Gurdjieff asserted that instinctual (body-based) love is the most common form of love all around the world. He was sceptical of romantic or emotional (head-based) love, saying that it can often turn into its opposite (as our feelings change). His view was that the highest form of love comes from the intellectual, thinking (head-based) centre.

In George Gurdjieff's analysis of the Enneagram and sex, he recognized that rather than setting oneself up to achieve an imagined or ideal standard of sexual behaviour, as so many religions and spiritual traditions try to uphold, personal awakening, with the body as the foundation, necessitates presence with our individual sexuality as it is. Freeing our sexuality from our judgements, shame, and fears is an enormous undertaking in the journey of inner work.

Despite Gurdjieff's scepticism and assertion that heart-based love doesn't endure time, 'romance' has got to be one of the most fun and least executed activities in many relationships. With all the distractions we have in our busy lives, it seems many couples never find the time to be romantic — and that is why it might lead to love's demise. Romance is about getting closer. There is also a big difference between sex and romance. In most relationships, if you want the former to be great, you have to fully engage in the latter (and necessarily beforehand if it's a new relationship). Don't ever disbelieve that a truly romantic encounter won't end in better sex, even in casual sexual relationships.

Strangely, and somewhat sadly, it is the case that people often put more effort into the Romance of an Affair, than they do maintaining the Intimacy in their Marriages. Affairs often never lose the elements of Romance, Passion nor Friendship, maybe because distance, or the infrequency of meet-ups, maintains the novelty and even makes the heart grow stronger.

As we are no longer, or have never been, primates nor animals, 'sex with consciousness' takes meaning for us. We are fully aware and conscious of our own instincts, indulgence and enjoyment of sex – our actions are not simply primeval acts of Procreation and Natural Selection."

Part Five - The Path To A Chosen Destiny

"With this 'Personal Blueprint' you are then ready to seek 'Reason for Being' and discover your True Purpose and Destiny.

'To be your best self you'll need to first discover who you really are, then maximize your strengths and improve on your weaknesses. You need to completely shift your mindset and take control of your life. When you do, you'll discover a whole new you. A self-that's deeply at peace with the world yet is also driven to achieve increased success.'

- Tony Robbins

Your ‘State of mind’ is about the quality of your consciousness as it relates to the outside world, as well as the perception of inner thoughts and emotions. It includes your mood and your mental state at a certain point in time. Depressed, anxious, rational, critical, and engaged are all examples of states of mind.

The eight ‘Destiny Secrets’ disclosed in the Chapters so far are chosen to focus on the most important aspects of your future life: Wisdom, Integrity, Work Ethic, Resilience and Purpose. They rely ‘wellness’ in terms of relationships and family, intellectual intelligence and learning, health of body mind and spirit, sexual expression, and selflessness.

The setting of Personal Goals on the road to destiny is nurtured, not prescribed. They will end up end being different for everyone. They will be stepping-stones rather than milestones, whether physical – health/appearance/exercise; financial – income/investments; personal development - knowledge/education/self-improvement. family- relationships/development of children; spiritual- transcendence/purpose; social – friends/community; or career-ambitions/ dreams/ hopes.

The ‘End Game’ will not be your goals it will be your ultimate dream; the thing you want more than anything - your true calling in life, who you are meant to be. Pursuing your dream will be your destiny and give you determination to see your goals through, spark your creativity and inspiration, and in finally doing something that makes you happy, will inevitably end up helping others in your life, and maybe contributing to the changes in the world you wish you could influence.”
