

Hollywood Can Be A Rough Town... But Not For A Kick-Ass Super Stunt Woman...

Sarah H. Brown

by GiGi Bishop

Sarah H. Brown has spent the last 12 years in Los Angeles as a single mother, working as a massage therapist to pay the bills while pursuing her dream to be an action actor and filmmaker. First, a stunt woman doing martial arts fight scenes for film and television, Brown returned to her childhood love of writing and directing when she was incapacitated by an injury during stunt training. Fueled with a desire to tell stories, and the need to blaze a trail for her late start in the Hollywood scene, she bought her own camera equipment and began writing, directing and starring in her own short action films.

GB: Did you ever think within your career of moving to Bulgaria?

SHB: NEVER! In a million years...I love L.A. and had no desire to move until I met this Bulgarian stuntman while on location filming in Serbia.

Over the years, I have learned to trust my instincts and every cell in my body was screaming to go there! I knew there were no guarantees for work or the relationship. I was so hungry for adventure and opportunities to shoot MY OWN films in a raw and gritty location like Bulgaria.

Last November while working as a stunt woman on a film in Serbia, she fell in love with a Bulgarian stuntman, started to learn the language and began hearing about American action films being shot in Bulgaria. On a whim Brown sent her films to a Bulgarian production company, sold everything and bought a ticket to Bulgaria. The production company contacted her right away and three months after arriving she saw her dream come true. Brown has starred in her first action feature film, the first of a series titled COLD FUSION, and landed a smaller role on a made for TV movie with Richard Burgi, titled Super Eruption. She has appeared on National Bulgarian Television in an interview while training with a local stunt team and is currently working on writing a feature to shoot in Bulgaria.
