American Legion, Post 543
South Brunswick JROTC Leadership Courses

Richard H. Stewart Jr. American Legion Post 543, Saint James, NC, has become an integral part of the South Brunswick High School Junior Reserve Officer Training Program through direct support to its curriculum and marksmanship shooting team.

Post member George Freeman, who also serves as the Curriculum Coordinator for over 20 separate courses being taught by Post members, is pictured presenting a series of leadership courses developed specifically for the SBHS JROTC cadet community. This series is designed to help cadets define their own personal path ahead which includes visioning, personal goal setting, and measurement. Volunteer instructors begin working with cadets when they are freshmen and remain by their side throughout their 4-year JROTC experience. The thousands of volunteer hours donated over the years by exceptionally highly qualified professionals including retired senior military officers, senior government executives, former corporate CEO's, CPA's, attorneys, and a retired judge provides a truly unique and powerful positive impact across the entire cadet community.
