2021 DONOR RECOGNITION REPORT

FOUNDATION FOR ADVOCACY INCLUSION & RESOURCES

http://www.fair-foundation.org/about.html
FAIR’s mission is to promote diversity within the plaintiffs’ employment bar in California, so the attorneys representing California’s workers are as diverse as those they seek to represent. FAIR also seeks generally to raise public consciousness about worker’s rights and remedies, to provide educational opportunities and programs to individuals who seek to advance the rights of workers, including but not limited to fellowships, internships, and scholarships, and to carry on other educational activities associated with FAIR’s goals. FAIR thanks each and every one of our 2021 donors who collectively helped FAIR raise about $182,000 for its programs! Together, let's keep this going!
In 2009, with the support and involvement of CELA leaders, FAIR was founded by former California Employment Lawyers Association (CELA) Chair, David Duchrow and CELA Administrative Director, Christina Krasomil. FAIR was created with the intention to help diversify the plaintiffs' bar and educate the public about workplace fairness. FAIR provides educational and work opportunities to law students and new lawyers from culturally diverse backgrounds to strengthen and enrich our league of lawyers who are passionate about employee justice and advancing the rights of workers.

Through FAIR’s Employee Justice Fellowship Program, going on its 15th year, we have provided educational and job opportunities to numerous students by placing them with workers’ rights attorneys who are members of the California Employment Lawyers Association. In 2014, FAIR launched the FAIR Fellowship (formerly the Sanford Heisler Public Interest Diversity Fellowship) to increase diversity in California’s plaintiffs’ civil rights and employment bar.

Eve Wagner brings more than 30 years of experience as a civil litigation trial attorney to her thriving mediation and arbitration practice. Eve joined Signature Resolution in 2019 as a mediator and arbitrator. Before that, Eve has mediated and arbitrated through her former law firm, which she co-founded in 1997. Eve has mediated and arbitrated hundreds of cases involving employment, entertainment, business and real estate matters.

More than 18 years ago, Eve expanded her litigation practice to include mediation and arbitration. Since then, her mediation and arbitration practice has involved a wide variety of disputes, ranging from single to multi-party, complex matters involving employment, Civil Rights/Unruh Act, class actions, PAGA claims, fee disputes, premises liability, legal malpractice, and personal injury. She also served on the arbitration panels of the American Arbitration Association, National Arbitration / Mediation and Independent Film & Television Alliance.

Previously she co-founded a successful litigation boutique and practiced extensively in federal and state courts, as well as alternate dispute resolution forums. She litigated both plaintiff- and defense-side employment cases, as well as both sides of entertainment, business and real estate matters. Ms. Wagner represented individuals as well as small to large publicly-traded corporations in various industries, including entertainment, real estate, financial, retail, hospitality and manufacturing. Ms. Wagner’s mediation style emphasizes common sense, clear communication and the ability to solve difficult problems with practical solutions.

"Why donate to FAIR? Upon learning about Mark Rudy’s challenge, I readily accepted. It’s hard to believe that it’s 2020 and there is still such a lack of diversity in the legal professional. Thank you FAIR for working to change that and for truly making a difference. I am delighted to participate in helping young lawyers pursue their dreams of fighting for the civil rights of workers."

David Phillips, Esq. is a mediator at Signature Resolution who specializes in all areas of employment litigation. His unique experience representing both plaintiffs and defendants as trial counsel helps him carefully evaluate the risks and rewards faced by both parties. He is known for his rigorous, diligent, detail oriented preparation, his ability to connect authentically with the parties and establish trust and transparency in both rooms, and his relentless and tireless follow-up until the parties finally achieve a resolution, no matter how long it takes. David never gives up. David’s mediation practice today focuses on issues including gender, race, age, disability, sexual orientation discrimination, harassment, sexual assault, retaliation, and wrongful termination, as well as wage and hour claims, PAGA, and class actions.

“I donated because I believe in diversity and inclusion – and FAIR does a fantastic job of promoting those core values and creating those essential opportunities in our profession. I believe in a world where everyone gets a seat at the table, where we are enriched by our diversity, not afraid of it, and where everyone feels included, heard, and valued. I’m grateful for all the tremendous work FAIR does.”
The question is not why I donated to FAIR but rather why isn’t everyone else committing to this wonderful cause. Joining the legal profession in 1977 as a female employee’s rights practitioner, I encountered much resistance and diminution because of my gender. Over the years much has changed, but so much remains to be done. Creating diversity in the employee right’s bar is a crucial component in advancing the rights of workers everywhere. Through mentorship and financial assistance, FAIR enables law students and new lawyers to fulfill the vision of diversity, equity and inclusion. It has been my honor and privilege to be part of CELA, first as a practitioner, then as a neutral, and since its inception, the FAIR Foundation.

Christine Masters is a partner in the firm of Masters & Ribakoff, established in 1992 in Santa Monica, California. Since 1994, and exclusively since January 1998, she has served as an independent mediator, arbitrator, and investigator/factfinder in all types of employment matters.
Before deciding to dedicate her practice to alternate dispute resolution services, Ms. Masters was an employment rights litigator for 20 years. She began her career in employment rights in 1978 as an investigator, and then trial attorney, for the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. She was recruited to join Allred, Maroko, Goldberg & Ribakoff (now Allred, Maroko & Goldberg) in 1982, leaving in 1992 with Alan Ribakoff to start their own firm.

A member of numerous professional associations, Ms. Masters was selected as a Distinguished Fellow by the International Academy of Mediators in 2011 and elected as a fellow in the College of Labor & Employment Lawyers in 1999. In 2000-2001, she served as Chair of the Labor & Employment Section of the Los Angeles County Bar Association. For many years, she was selected as one of the Top 50 Neutrals in California.
Gail Glick has been mediating disputes since 2002, and she became a full time mediator and arbitrator in 2020. Prior to her neutral career, she litigated in California for 26 years -- from 1994 through 2020, and she spent almost her entire legal career representing parties in employment law disputes.

For six of the first eight years of her career, she litigated employment law disputes and assisted employers in the prevention of discrimination, harassment, and retaliation through trainings and investigations for various clients at the Musick, Peeler firm in Los Angeles.

In her work on the employees’ side, she worked as a solo practitioner, mediator, and investigator from mid-2002 through mid-2009. She was a founding partner of Alexander Krakow + Glick LLP (now known as Alexander Morrison + Fehr LLP) which, from 2009 through 2020, represented both public and private entity employees in all aspects of employment law disputes, resolutions, and trials. Gail’s balance of plaintiffs’ and defense work over her career uniquely qualifies her to mediate for a diverse group of employers and employees.

"I contribute to FAIR to continue my longstanding commitment to supporting diverse employee rights advocacy."
Gail is a Fellow of the College of Labor and Employment Lawyers and is a Lecturer in Law at USC Gould School of Law, teaching employment dispute resolution. She is a Vice President on the Board of Directors of the Disability Rights Legal Center, a former Chair of the Los Angeles County Bar Association’s ("LACBA") Labor and Employment Law Section (2018-2019), and a former co-chair of the ABA’s Technology Symposium in Labor and Employment Law. She lectures frequently on employment law issues and ADR.

Gail received her J.D. from Loyola Law School in 1994 and her B.A., cum laude, from Amherst College in 1991. She has been named a “Rising Star” or “Super Lawyer” by Southern California Super Lawyers Magazine every year since 2009, and she was one of Lawdragon's 500 Leading Plaintiff Employment Lawyers in 2018 and 2019.
After spending his early career litigating personal injury cases (on both the plaintiff and defense side), in 1999 Mark began to specialize in the litigation of employment cases in state and federal courts and various arbitration forums. In both his personal injury work and subsequent and current employment work, Mark has participated in hundreds of mediations or other informal case negotiations since his admission to the bar in 1992. Recognizing the value of the process and reaching a level of comfort navigating through it, Mark began to recognize his talents and personality were well suited to the role of "mediator." He has been recognized as a Northern California “Super Lawyer” (limited to the top 5% of the attorneys California) in the area of Employment Litigation annually beginning in 2009.

"I contribute to FAIR because after working for plaintiffs for more than 25 years and being involved with CELA and other like-minded organizations, I have come to appreciate the vital importance of diversity among the plaintiffs’ bar. I have benefited greatly from the diversity of perspective and input I can now receive from our more diverse bar, and I believe our clients throughout the plaintiff community likewise have benefited from the broader range of options and perspective within our ranks. But, there is more work to do to ensure we continue to expand access and provide a route for those individuals who want to represent plaintiffs but may not otherwise have the ability to do so. THAT is why I have and will continue to support FAIR’s important mission. Thank you to all those who support this wonderful program."
Mark started conducting mediations in 2009 for the San Francisco Superior Court through the Early Settlement Program administered by the Bar Association of San Francisco. At the beginning of 2011, Mark was accepted for enrollment onto the panel with the Northern District Court, which included 40+ hours of mediation training prior to acceptance on the panel. Also in 2011, Mark began serving as a Settlement Conference Panelist with the Sonoma County Superior Court, and in March 2012 was appointed to the Court mediation panels for both Alameda and Marin County Superior Courts. In September 2012, Mark was appointed to serve as a Settlement Conference Officer with the San Francisco Superior Court where he conducts Mandatory Settlement Conferences on behalf of the Court.

In addition to his work as a volunteer panelist serving the various state and federal courts in the bay area, Mark has conducted more than 400 private mediations out of the firm’s offices in San Francisco. Mark has mediated both individual and class action cases, involving virtually every type of claim, including: discrimination based on gender, age, race, religion, disability (including disability access cases), sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, and pregnancy; sexual harassment; wage and hour violations; whistleblower/retaliation; wrongful termination; invasion of privacy; violations of the California Family Rights Act, the Family Medical Leave Act, and employment-related defamation.
Levy Vinick Burrell Hyams LLP is a proud supporter of FAIR. Based in Oakland, the boutique worker’s rights firm has championed justice and fairness for California workers since 2010. Their representation has included employees in individual lawsuits and class actions, from the Oakland Raiderettes class action against wage theft to Tyann Sorrell’s sexual harassment lawsuit against the former Dean of UC Berkeley’s law school, and from a dishwasher’s wrongful termination lawsuit against Denny’s to defending #MeToo silence breaker Pamela Lopez in a defamation claim brought by the disgraced California State Assemblyman she accused of sexual assault. Much of the firm’s success comes from their internal collaborative process. This collaboration extends to clients as well. LVBH continues to stay committed to civil rights values, utilizing a feminist approach to interactions that’s respectful of everyone.

"As civil rights lawyers, FAIR helps all of us walk the walk of diversity and change our profession for the better."
After a highly-successful litigation career spanning over 40 years, Kathy Dickson is now available as a private mediator, arbitrator, consent decree monitor, and discovery referee. In addition to her litigation practice, Ms. Dickson has served as a mediator in employment disputes for over ten years. She has mediated case involving most areas of employment law, including: discrimination based on age, race, religion, disability, national origin, and pregnancy; sexual harassment; whistleblower/retribution; wrongful termination; violations of the California Family Rights Act, the Family Medical Leave Act, and the Equal Pay Act; and employment-related defamation. During her career, Kathy was a frequent speaker, and active in state and national employment bar associations, including many years in various positions in CELA. She earned many accolades, her favorite being CELA’s Joe Posner Award.

"I have been so impressed over the years by CELA’s unfailing commitment to diversity, including its development of the Foundation for Advocacy, Inclusion, and Resources (FAIR). The diverse fellows whose work as plaintiffs’ employment lawyers was greatly assisted by FAIR, have become amazing rising stars. Strong leaders like Bernard Alexander and Toni Jaramilla and many others, who have made FAIR such a vibrant organization, inspired me to make a sustaining commitment to FAIR’s great work. I salute all of FAIR’s current and former Board Members and staff."

"As civil rights lawyers, we should put our money where our mouth is -- fighting every day to provide opportunities for diverse workers, we should ourselves model the kind of diverse workplaces we seek to protect. Far too often in the past, we have had less diversity at our counsel's table than at the table of the counsel for defendants seeking to protect companies accused of racism and other injustices.

FAIR has helped change that equation, by helping more than 100 diverse new lawyers connect with CELA member firms - I am proud that many have now entered our practice area and become leaders themselves. We cannot expect that diverse law students and new attorneys will be able to volunteer their time to learn the ropes in our profession - they need to earn decent salaries, to pay bills - they are not all coming from places of privilege where money is no issue. FAIR's fellowship ensure reasonable compensation, to give diverse law students and new lawyers a real choice and opportunity to enter this meaningful practice."

Allred, Maroko & Goldberg (“AMG”) proudly donates to FAIR every year because we passionately believe in FAIR’s mission to increase diversity within the Plaintiff’s employment bar. We should look like the clients who we represent! AMG was founded in 1976 to assist individual employees throughout California victimized by their employers as well as anyone who has suffered because of a violation of civil rights. AMG has grown to twelve attorneys today, all of whom are committed to fighting for employees’ rights: Gloria Allred, Nathan Goldberg, Michael Maroko, John West, Marcus Spiegel, Maria Diaz, Renee Mochkatel, Dolores Y. Leal, Christina Cheung, Byron Lau, Kirby Cañon, and Olivia Flechsig.

- Reputation/success: In the past twenty years, we have won over half a billion dollars in settlements and verdicts on behalf of our clients. In the past five years alone, we at AMG has won over $100 million for individual clients, including some of the most public and prominent cases in recent years. Our reputation and success in the courtroom show our opponents that we are serious at all times.

- Dedication to individual clients: Our firm provides power to the powerless, helping clients who have been victimized by those who possess money, celebrity or influence. Our attorneys are dedicated to not only the recovery of fair compensation, but also to setting precedents to ensure that others are less likely to be victimized in the same way again. Our chief focus is always on our clients. We believe that personal interaction and clear communication are the only ways to meet your goals and win your case.

- Respect: Gloria Allred, Michael Maroko, Nathan Goldberg and the other attorneys of the firm are all respected litigators with a substantial record of service to their peers and the community. "I donated to FAIR because when I was first coming out of law school I had no clue about plaintiffs’ side private practice. As an immigrant with no exposure to the profession before law school, I know what a huge difference it makes when established professionals and other people of influence reach out to offer guidance and resources.”

Levy Vinick Burrell Hyams LLP is a proud supporter of FAIR. Based in Oakland, the boutique worker’s rights firm has championed justice and fairness for California workers since 2010. Their representation has included employees in individual lawsuits and class actions, from the Oakland Raiderettes class action against wage theft to Tyann Sorrell’s sexual harassment lawsuit against the former Dean of UC Berkeley’s law school, and from a dishwasher’s wrongful termination lawsuit against Denny’s to defending #MeToo silence breaker Pamela Lopez in a defamation claim brought by the disgraced California State Assemblyman she accused of sexual assault. Much of the firm’s success comes from their internal collaborative process. This collaboration extends to clients as well. LVBH continues to stay committed to civil rights values, utilizing a feminist approach to interactions that’s respectful of everyone.

"As civil rights lawyers, FAIR helps all of us walk the walk of diversity and change our profession for the better."
