MISCELLANEOUS NATURALIZATION NOTES

Naturalization procedures differ in every country. In France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, and Spain, a department in the executive branch of the government supervises naturalization. In Belgium, the legislature grants citizenship. Each Swiss canton (state) has the authority to naturalize an alien.

In Canada, the minister of manpower and immigration issues certificates of citizenship through county and district courts. The Citizenship Act of 1946 recognizes two types of citizens: natural-born and naturalized. Naturalization of aliens consists of three steps: (1) the petition for citizenship, (2) the hearing in court, and (3) taking the oath of allegiance in a second court hearing. An alien generally must meet the following requirements for Canadian citizenship. He must be at least 21 years old, and have lived in Canada for a year before applying. He must have been lawfully admitted to live permanently in the country, and such residence must have been established for five years. He must be of good character, have a knowledge of English or French, know the responsibilities of citizenship, and intend to live permanently in Canada. The alien files his petition in court, and the court posts the petition publicly for three months.

British dominions and colonies may naturalize aliens, but these persons do not then become citizens of other British dominions or colonies. All countries, however, recognize a person as a British subject if he is a naturalized citizen of the United Kingdom and its colonies under the British Nationality Act of 1948. This law provides that a citizen of any colony or of any member of the Commonwealth is a British subject, or a Commonwealth citizen.
