THE TRAJECTORY OF THE SURPRISE COMET OF 2020

The purpose of this illustration is to present some celestial observations of the newly discovered comet C/2020 F3. And perhaps if this comet is alluding to the prophetic notion of the coming Rapture event, thus the possible 'Rapture Comet'? The comet was discovered and observed in March of 2020 using the NEOWISE space telescope. It was cataloged as C/2020 F3. Based on several articles, the comet was not anticipated to survive the perihelion or swing around the Sun on July 3rd-4th but has and is approaching Earth. It is anticipated now to be visible to the naked eye, starting mid-July. This comet is expected to be much better than the 2 prior ones, Atlas and SWAN. This comet, that has its origin near the constellation of Centaur will be the brightest in 7 years according to research. According to research, many are tracking the comet, such as Astronomers at universities and even Astronauts in the Space Station. Based on the research of Space.com, the comet should start to be visible to the naked-eye by July 12, 2020. It will be seen in the northwest region of the sky and will continue to climb and become brighter. It is projected to make its closest approach to Earth on July 22, 2020 with the best viewing just after sunset around the 25th of July. According to the latest information, the comet will not be seen again until some 8,700+ years later. Why this comet could be of some prophetic significance has to do with its trajectory. It is interesting where the comet originated from and where it has headed and eventually centered on. This is based on its counter-clockward orbit.
