6 Reflections from Rabbi A

The Trump era has begun. Of American Jewry, 24% voted for now-President Trump, down 6% from Gov. Romney's total in 2012. 71%, 3% and 2% went respectively for the Democratic, Libertarian and Green Parties.

I write this note on the eve of one of my many trips to Israel. In all likelihood, the city in which I shall spend Friday will soon become official recognized by the United States at the capital of Israel. Mr. Obama's administration already built a spanking new facility in Jerusalem for that purpose (even though, for some very complicated and changing political reasons successive US administrations since Israel's founding have kept the US Embassy in Tel Aviv). Withal, I like the move.

That's "American Jews." What of Jewish Americans?

I was reminded by Arthur Brooks, president of the American Enterprise Institute, of the story of W. C. Fields as he lay dying in his hospital bed. From outside came the sound of a newsboy shouting, "Wuxtry! Stock market prices fall!" Stirred out of his stupor, Fields signaled those at his bedside and whispered, "Poor little urchins out there — undernourished, no doubt improperly clad — something's got to be done about them, something's got to be done."

He dozed off, but seconds later, opened his eyes again.

"On second thought," he said, "Scr-w 'em."

With one party control, we are about to see if the theory – trickle down economics – actually works in practice. 75% of Jewish Americans think that the theory – that "all boats will rise" – as American industry is deregulated and unleashed is "narischkeit," fool's gold. Other believe that the theory is as good as gold.

Whatever the plan is to be, I hope that the lower and middle classes see a closing in the seemingly ever-widening gap between the haves and the have-nots. I hope that our people can rest assured that the government of the people and by the people is for the people's healthcare. The need to see all of this secure does not keep the W. C. Field's of our story wake at night. Some identify which his "second thought.

If you don't really care, you might save yourself from reading on.

But even if you do care, there is little we – the average American – can do about the fact of our nation's economy or of its ethos. So what can WE do?

I have counseled many of my friends, just as Brooks does: "Think small." We cannot help a million, but we can help many, some, a few.

It is told of the famous Rabbi Levi Yitzhak of Berdichev, who dozed off before the concluding service of Yom Kippur. In a dream, he had ascended to the highest heaven to stand before the throne of judgment in order to find out what the destiny of his beloved community would be for the coming year. Levi Yitzhak came before the scales of judgment for his very own, little town of Berdichev. Seeing that the side of the scale with good deeds had but a few pitiful items on it, while the side of the scale with the deeds of omission and commission were full, he turned to God and with panic and fear.

"Sovereign of the of the Universe, I know that the record of my people in Berdichev is dismal, but what do you expect? Had you put us into a Garden of Eden, you could expect us to act like angels, but, dear God, You placed us into a harsh and difficult setting. Before it is too late, show us Your grace and mercy and send us Your redeemer."

God was willing to discuss the matter with Levi Yitzhak: "Levi Yitzhak, you put forth a very cogent argument. There is much merit in it. Sit down and tell me about what you'd like Me to do. As Yom Kippur is ending, you have but moments to make your case."

Levi Yitzhak was about to sit down and with the time quickly running out, to convince God to save the world when, out of the corner of his eye, he glanced down at his little town of Berdichev, and he noticed that Hayyim, the laundry man, to whom no one paid any attention had fainted. He was about to expire from fasting.

"Save Hayyim," pleaded Levi Yitzhak, for as our tradition states, "To save one life – it is as if one is saving the world." And with that, Hayyim came to and God with-drew.

There are two points I wish to make. The first is based on the wisdom of Moses Maimonides (d. 1104), who said: "We should see ourselves throughout the year as if our deeds and those of the world are evenly poised between good and bad, so that our next act may change both the balance of our lives and that of the world. We must see what we do as making all the difference, even if we underestimate our influence.

Consider, for example, the 1966 an eleven-year-old African-American boy who moved with his family to a white neighborhood in Washington. Sitting on the front step of the house, passers-by turned to look at them, but no one gave them a smile or even a much as a glance of recognition. Years later, writing about those first days in their new home, he says, "I knew we were not welcome here. I knew we would not be liked here. I knew we would have no friends here. I knew we should not have moved here ..."

As he was thinking those thoughts, a woman passed by on the other side of the road. She turned to the children and with a broad smile said, "Welcome!"

Disappearing into the house, she emerged minutes later with a tray laden with drinks and cream-cheese and jelly sandwiches. That moment – the young man later wrote – changed his life. It gave him a sense of belonging where there was none before. It made him realize, at a time when race relations in the United States were fraught with legal discrimination, that a black family could feel at home in a white area and that there could be relationships that were color-blind.

Over the years, he came to admire much about the woman across the street, but it was that first spontaneous act of greeting that became, for him, a definitive memory. It broke down a wall of separation and turned strangers into friends.

TBS Madrichim Shine!

This will be the first in a series of articles called "Spotlight on our Religious School: What we Love about Kehillat Torah".

As I was making my usual rounds throughout our Religious School last week, I stopped by a small group of fifth graders, all of whom were working on Hebrew and having a good time with the High School Sophomore who was supervising their group and helping them. It is always gratifying to see one "generation" of our TBS kids teaching another, and doing it with so much skill and joy. Each Sunday I am struck by how many wonderful, responsible and committed teenagers we have working in our school. These kids wake up at 8:00 am each Sunday morning and come to Religious School and work as integral members of our staff. As a synagogue community, we should be proud that more than 607th – 12th graders have made this terrific commitment.

As a result of having so many 7th-12th graders who show up to work each Sunday morning, we have many different jobs for them. Our 7th graders are in a "Madrichim In Training" program with teacher Jordan Ankerman, who is in her third year of running that program. The word "Madrich" means guide or counselor. In the program the 7th graders learn about group dynamics, how to help control a classroom, how to do one-on-one Hebrew tutoring, they learn downtime games, leadership skills and have a really fun social time hanging out with one another.

Many of our 8th grade madrichim are tasked each Sunday with a series of jobs around the school. They act as Temple photographers, videographers, art specialists, animal mascots, attendance/tzedakah collectors, Rabbi B's "executive assistant" and also act as substitute teachers if one of the classroom madrichim is gone. This informal time is also a great opportunity for the 8th graders to bond with one another and to form Jewish friendships that will last and last. Some 8th graders are permanently placed in classrooms as well. The High School madrichim, led by our Madrichim Coordinator Ben Rosen, do all kinds of wonderful and important jobs. Many of them are teacher aides in classrooms, helping teachers with everything from making copies, to getting supplies together, to teaching in small groups and sometimes teaching their own lesson to the class. A majority of these kids have been madrichim since they were in 8th grade and are doing a fantastic job of learning and growing. Some of the High School madrichim also work in the front office, help make and deliver snack and can provide younger kids with powerful one-on-one experiences.

Some of our madrichim are Kesher Aides, which means they work one on one with kids who may have learning disabilities, or other challenges. These madrichim are so great with their individual kids – they are warm, caring, and understanding. I couldn't be prouder of this small group.

Above all else, all of our madrichim act as role models to the younger kids. It is so wonderful to walk into one of our 6th grade classrooms and hear the kids talking about their excitement to one day be a madrich or madricha in our Religious School. The program is so positive in so many ways. It encourages kids to stay active in our Religious School after a bar/bat mitzvah happens, and it makes becoming a madrich or madricha a rite of passage. If you have a son or daughter in 7th – 12th grade and he or she is interested in helping out on Sunday mornings, please give me a call and we will find a job!

The Directive

The generosity of our TBS community is truly special. I am excited to update you on the success of recent Fundraisers:

High Holy Day Appeal- Our monetary goal was $20,000, and we exceeded our goal by $3,000!!

Hannukah Raffle- Thanks to the sponsorships by Wesley Woods and Shirck Orthodontics, we raised

$4,000 with this year's raffle. A shout out to Lance Shnider, who secured the sponsors, and printed/stuffed/mailed this year's raffle info.

Capital Campaign/Mortgage Payoff- WE ARE SO CLOSE!!! Since starting the Second Wave of our campaign 18 months ago, charitable congregants have helped us tremendously. With the help of Steve and Theresa Belford's lead gift, and many other generous donors, we have collected and committed funds that place us WITHIN $50,000 of our GOAL of PAYING OFF THE MORTGAGE!! This campaign started in 2007.

Finishing off this campaign is crucial to our temple community, and would be a meaningful tribute to our soon to be Rabbi Emeritus Howard Apothaker and incoming Senior Rabbi Benjy Bar-Lev.

Please contact me regarding any of the above, or to discuss other giving opportunities of interest to you.

PLANNING FOR THE NEXT 4 YEARS AND PERHAPS LONGER

For almost ten years one of the Board of Trustees highest priorities has been to pay off the Temple's mortgage and to complete all deferred maintenance of the temple's real property. The purpose of this goal was and continues to be the "freeing up" of congregational revenues to enlarge and improve Temple programming that directly benefits our members. Mike Rothstein, V.P. Finance, Steve Herman, immediate Past President and Lance Shnider,

Trustee, are spearheading our lay leadership's dash to the finish line in this effort (Please contact Executive Director, Bonnie Abramowitz. at babramowitz@tbsohio.org or (614) 8554882 if you would like to assist!). One of the by-products of this process was the initiation of a long-term Strategic Planning activity for the Board. Human beings sometimes get so consumed in the accomplishment of our day-to-day objectives that we fail to step back and candidly assess our environment and ourselves for future circumstances. Led by Trustee Emily Alonso-Taub, Associate Director of Advancement at Ohio Wesleyan University, and her friend, Kennia Papadakis, Senior Lecturer in Finance at the Fisher College of Business at The Ohio State University, the Board has been engaged in an energetic analysis of Temple Beth Shalom's strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and "threats". Since the activity started in mid-November the Board, Rabbi Bar-Lev and a couple members have spent two 2-hour sessions solely devoted to this exercise. The third meeting is planned for the afternoon of February 5th. We hope that the product of the Strategic Planning effort will not only provide guidance to future congregational leadership but also enrich the relationship between the Temple and our membership. Finally, as Steve Herman and Bethany Klynn, co-chairs of TBS's Assistant Rabbi Search Committee, reported in last month's Window this month begins a rapid-fire chain of events that will hopefully result in the engagement of a new assistant rabbi effective July 1st. We are pleased that 10 of Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion's Class of 2017's expected 25 graduates will be interviewing with Rabbi Bar-Lev, Steve and Bonnie Cram in Los Angeles over Super Bowl weekend. Later in February a number of events will be held at the temple for members to meet and greet the candidates selected by the search committee. We want to invite all of our members to participate in this exciting experience. Please pay attention to our website www.tbsohio.org, the e-Window and correspondence from the Temple for specific details on the search activities!

WEXNER SERVICE CORPS 2017

The Wexner Foundation invites 11th and 12th graders in the 2017-18 academic year to apply for the Wexner Service Corps, beginning with a trip to Pittsburgh (June 4-9, 2017) and followed by year-round service in Columbus.

The Service Corps is for those who want to

- be a better leader
- be challenged
- learn how to make a difference
- give back to our community
- learn about real world challenges
- engage in Jewish conversations

The Wexner Service Corps is competitive and selective. We encourage applicants to give appropriate thought and effort to their applications. All completed applications must be received by Monday, February 13.

Go to WexnerServiceCorps.org or contact Rabbi Michael Emerson at memerson@wexner.net for additional information.

REPAIR, REBUILD, RENEW

I applied to the Wexner Service Corps in 2015 after hearing positive feedback from friends who had participated in the program previously. I was entering my junior year of high school, and I had never been on a service trip, let alone one with a focus on Jewish service. I spent two summers at Jewish camp during middle school, but, aside from religious school, that was the extent of my time engaged in significant Jewish learning.

In June of that year, I traveled with 40 other teens to Detroit, Michigan. I quickly adjusted to the group atmosphere, and each day I was usually paired with a different member of the Corps to accomplish various service activities, including working at a community garden, Jewish cemetery and food bank. This not only helped me make new friends, but also allowed me to gain a new perspective about the communities outside of my home in Bexley. Throughout the week, we spent time in inner city elementary schools playing with the students and creating a fun field day activity for the end of the school year. For the first time, I saw a different version of school – one we found out was common across the country: no air conditioning, limited resources, and dilapidated buildings. Many of the schools had been saved from closing by groups of alumni that had come together, but received little funding beyond that. Each day's service experience was paired with Jewish learning and reflection, where we discussed the meaning of tzedek, justice, in the Torah and the best ways to help those in need.

I was so moved and motivated by my experiences in Detroit with the Corps that, upon my return, I created a social justice club at my high school. We focus on different social justice topics each month, and make it our mission to initiate conversations about these issues within the school. Because of my experiences in Detroit and the monthly service events in Columbus, as well as my dedication to the social justice club, I applied to the Senior Leadership Cohort (SLC) of the Wexner Service Corps for the summer of 2016.

Six WSC members from the Detroit trip returned to be a part of the SLC, and we served as group leaders and role models for the new WSC participants on the trip to Philadelphia. While there, we worked with students in inner city neighborhoods and cleaned up an expansive Jewish cemetery that dated back to the 1700s and which had fallen into disrepair and neglect. Most importantly, once again the days of service were paired with thought-provoking conversations about the role Judaism plays in service and our responsibilities toward broader society and those in need. Our conversation about the City of Brotherly Love, and what that really meant in the context of the Torah, sticks with me to this day.

Wexner Service Corps not only encouraged and emboldened me to become an activist in my own school, it also helped me strengthen the connection I have to Jewish texts and messages contained in our Jewish tradition. I was able to build lasting relationships with other Jewish teens from all around Columbus and take part in thoughtful discussions. Last but not least, I was able to open my eyes to see the harsh realities of many communities in need around the country, and I am proud that I was able to play a small part in helping to make the world a better place.

The Kosher Bookworm

The Written Word

By Steve Seeskin, TBS Library Committee Chairperson

This month, The Kosher Bookworm will briefly review three loosely related books in our library. The first two are Sacred Treasure of the Cairo Genizah: The Amazing Discoveries of Forgotten Jewish History in an Egyptian Synagogue Attic and Stolen Words: The Nazi Plunder of Jewish Books, both by Rabbi Mark Glickman. The third book is Outwitting History: The Amazing Adventures of a Man Who Rescued a Million Yiddish Books, by Aaron Lansky.

Glickman was the Assistant Rabbi at Temple Israel in Dayton, Ohio, when Joy and I were members in the late 1980s and early 90s. We formed a bond with this then young rabbi that has lasted with occasional E-mail posts over the years. He now resides in Calgary, in the Canadian Province of Alberta.

• Sacred Treasure is the story of the 1896 rediscovery of the geniza, at the Ben Ezra Synagogue, in Cairo. This synagogue was active for many years when Jews lived in Muslim lands of the Middle East and Northern Africa. Moses Maimonides, was known to study and pray at the Ben Ezra Synagogue. Glickman tells about the extraordinary findings, the careful collection, preservation measures, packaging, shipping and cataloging of this treasure trove that some say rivals the Dead Sea Scrolls for importance. From scraps of ink faded artifacts, scholars have been able to piece together aspects of culture, trade, educational means, liturgy, and theology of Cairo's Jews. To quote about the finding, from the book's dust jacket, "Indiana Jones meets The DaVinci Code in an old Egyptian synagogue." This is an amazing venture that Glickman tells in a well-documented; yet, in a spell-bound manner.

- Stolen Words chronicles the plunder of Jewish books by the Nazis. In addition to public book burnings, the Nazis stole books from Jewish homes, synagogues and libraries and hid these books in tunnels and basement facilities of building such as castles. Glickman tells the story of how there was a massive organized Post World War II effort to locate and recover these books out of the ashes of the Holocaust. From the pages of these recovered books, the pre-war culture of European Jewry is revealed as a memorial to the victims of Nazi genocide.
- Outwitting History is Lansky's personal story of how he and a small group of U.S. college students began an effort to collect Yiddish language books. He collected from private home libraries and traveled to foreign lands in his passion to save these precious artifacts of a Jewish culture that was dying from assimilation. Ultimately, Lansky started the National Yiddish Book Center in Amherst, MA, so this collection has a permanent home. The Center has not only cataloged its holdings -- but, it has translated the entire collection into digitized English to be studied and enjoyed by all. Lansky's story is one of determination and is full of amusing anecdotal mini-stories.

These books can be found in your TBS Library shelved under the following numbers:

The young man, Stephen Carter, would become a law professor at Yale. In his book, Civility, he tells us of this Sara Kestenbaum who acted out of the Jewish traditional notion of "hesed - the doing of acts of kindness - which is in turn derived from the understanding that human beings are made in the image of God."

"Civility", he adds, "itself may be seen as part of hesed: it does indeed require kindnesses toward our fellow citizens, including the ones who are strangers, and even when it is hard."

"To this day", he adds, "I can close my eyes and feel on my tongue the smooth, slick sweetness of the cream cheese and jelly sandwiches that I gobbled on that summer afternoon when I discovered how a single act of genuine and unassuming civility can change a life forever."

And so the second, related point. Even while others trust the "unseen hand" of which Adam Smith spoke as the instrument that will "save the world;" even if you do not trust the "unseen hand" to lift up all the boats; and even if you think that what you might do will never "tilt the balance," you must still act. You must not despair: change a life and change the universe - one life at a time, one day at a time, one act at a time.

Sara Kestenbaum died long before Stephen Carter rose to success. We never know in advance what effect a single act may have. Sometimes we never know it at all. Because we cannot finish the work, or even predict its results, states our tradition, still "we are not free to desist from it."

So go small: Each act of besed on the personal level, each phone call on the political level, each prayer on the providential level lends itself to saving the world.
