42. Further Description of Important Features (Continue on reverse if necessary) This side-gabled building features a central gabled dormer, full, hipped, screened porch, and no chimney. Details are confined to the fenestration which consist of multi-paned and patterned single-sash windows. A shed-roofed addition is attached to the rear.				5. Other Name(s)
43. History and Significance This structure was built in 1904 as headquarters for a sportsman's club organized by a Cleveland, Ohio group. It represents the first of a new type of building erected expressly for recreation by people who were not residents of the island. It's use was seasonal, unlike other year-round facilities that were then available to the tourists that were mostly hotels					46. Prepared by Kevin Pape Betty Pape
44. Description of Environment and Outbuildings This building and the older home to the north sit in an opening of the second growth woods that now covers most of the western point of the island, known as Carpenter's point. Overlooking the lake, there is a view of Put-in-Bay to the west.				47. Organization KI Planning Commiss

As early as 1892 a preliminary study had been made for a sport club, proposing the use of the entire west point of the island. The actual lot on which the club was later built about 1 acre after the point was subdivided 1925. Primarily a fishing club, logs have been kept since its inception, the first entry being May 7, 1904. These logs show the member's names and dates on which they used these facilities, the weather conditions, numbers and kinds of fish caught, and other social activities. The club was incorporated as a non-profit organization. Under the name "The West Bay Club", articles of incorporation were filed with the Secretary of State (Ohio) on the 19th of March, 1925.
