

Hoarseness

Hoarseness is an abnormal change in your voice. It is caused by a variety of conditions in which the larynx, also called the voice box, and vocal chords are irritated or injured.

A few causes of hoarseness include:

- Laryngitis
- Yelling
- Infections
- Vocal cord nodules or polyps
- Reflux
- Allergies
- Smoking
- Thyroid condition
- Trauma of some kind to the vocal cords

Dr. Sewell will help you discover the underlying cause of your hoarseness based on your history and physical exam and develop a treatment plan for your particular need.
